

New Self-Study Interview Preparation Course for Job Seekers

Palladian International, LLC introduces a Self-Study Interview Preparation Course for Job Seekers interested in improving their interview skills. The course is delivered by email and is free for any job seeker interested.

Waynesboro, VA, August 29, 2008 --(PR.com)-- Palladian International, LLC is introducing an innovative and comprehensive interview preparation course for job seekers. The course is designed to help job seekers create a strong, compelling reason why they are the best choice to be hired. With many job seekers struggling to get job offers, poor interview skills are keeping opportunities out of reach.

The new interview course is a self-study course delivered by email. The course has 26 lessons. The first third of the course focuses on understanding the interview process from the hiring manager's perspective. The middle of the course provides specific techniques for fielding the twelve types of questions a job seeker may encounter. The course concludes with additional strategies to ensure the job seeker is prepared for their next interview.

The course is designed with a series of exercises that will allow a job seeker to practice and improve their interview skill level. Although there is plenty of theory in the course, the focus is on practical activities that improve interview skills quickly.

The course is a free service for any job seeker. Palladian is also introducing a companion coaching program, the Palladian Personalized One-on-One Interview Coaching Program. The companion program offers a series of coaching sessions that work on the techniques in the self-study course and three practice interviews offering the job seeker the chance to practice their new skills. Together, the free self-study course and the personalized coaching program offer an extremely fast, effective means to improve interview skills.
