

InvitingHome.com Launches Decor Blog to Inspire Homeowners

The new InvitingHome.com Blog offers countless home decor ideas and opinions designed to help homeowners unleash their creativity.

Waltham, MA, September 03, 2008 --(PR.com)-- InvitingHome.com — the authority on home decor and architectural products — has debuted its Home Decor Blog.

The InvitingHome.com Blog provides useful guidance on choosing everything from wood corbels to beautiful crown moldings. Designer-written blog entries are complemented by comments posted by visitors to the site.

"One of our primary goals at InvitingHome.com is to educate consumers on the various possibilities for making their home more beautiful," said interior designer Julia Delaney. "Our blog allows homeowners to learn more about home decoration and even to gain valuable insight from fellow homeowners."

In addition to wood corbels and crown moldings, the InvitingHome.com Blog has sections on the kitchen, home décor, lighting, ceiling decor and green design. The latest entries cover interesting topics such as adding the right finishing touches to the kitchen, the role of lighting fixtures in home design and the lack of regard shown for ceiling design.

Blog entries are being added all the time, and site visitors are encouraged to weigh in with their views and accounts of past experiences.

"We believe everyone has their creative side and fantasies that they have not tapped in to," added Delaney. "We're here to give you everything you need to unleash that creativity. After you finish your room, you should feel that it reflects your personality and your ideas — and that you got exactly what you need and want. There's no need for you to settle."
