

BiggerPockets.com Reaches Milestone; Breaks 100 Thousand Forum Post Mark

Denver, CO, October 05, 2008 --(PR.com)-- BiggerPockets.com, the premier real estate social networking site, has broken through the 100 thousand forum post mark, a further display of its phenomenal growth, and yet another indication that it is the place for real estate professionals, investors and consumers.

"This is an exciting time for BiggerPockets," says founder Joshua Dorkin. "We have been adding new, important features to BiggerPockets.com on a consistent basis because we want to optimize the user experience. The fact that we now have passed the symbolic 100 thousand forum post mark is proof that we have created a site that has truly become a vital part of the daily lives of tens of thousands of people who share the common interest of real estate. And, here's the best part: We will continue to grow and explore new things so that BiggerPockets will be the only real estate social networking/investing site anyone will ever need."

Just days ago, BiggerPockets launched BiggerPockets Blogs, an exclusive, full-featured blogging platform. It allows users to set up their very own real estate related blogs that are backed by the creative resources of BiggerPockets and the entire BiggerPockets family.

BiggerPockets is based in Denver and has been profiled by some of the most trusted names in U.S. media.

www.BiggerPockets.com is a real estate social network for investors, professionals and consumers. Their mission is to help educate people about all aspects of real estate and real estate investing and to provide tools and resources to enhance real estate knowledge, networking, marketing and dealmaking.
