There is no denying that the Internet is an extremely cluttered space. In order to ensure the visibility of a website, one should opt for search engine friendly web design. It is quite likely that readers would hang around only at websites that are relevant and easily accessible. Inappropriate design of a website very often makes smooth navigation difficult. A poorly organized and badly designed website can turn away the readers and potential customers. The key is to have intelligent design because the fact is that a website that does not present lucrative information fails to achieve its purpose.

In other words, it is vital to have a well-organized and well-structure website with appropriate content that can engage and magnetize the readers. Websites can lose traffic because of its poor design. Since traffic translates to customers, websites cannot afford to lose out merely because the site does not have a user-friendly layout. The solution is to build a website with design that is search engine friendly. A website that is search engine friendly is easily traced by search engines, thus it increases a site's visibility.
