

SaveImus.com Launched to Prevent the Firing of Don Imus

Republican blogger and radio show host Shawn Wasson launches website to defend Don Imus.

New York, NY, April 11, 2007 --(PR.com)-- SaveImus.com is a website dedicated to fighting the forces attempting to unseat radio and television host Don Imus. The site was launched by Shawn Wasson, a man who is no fan of Imus, after the onslaught of media attention as a result of Dom Imus's now infamous comment directed toward the Rutgers women's basketball team. Imus made this flippant remark during the course of his program and has since apologized. The purpose of SaveImus.com is to provide a place for people who support Don Imus to gather and send messages of their support to the top brass at MSNBC and WFAN, both of whom are employers of Imus. The site provides contact info for the employers and a short history of the controversy as well as videos of Imus's appearances in the media in the wake of this incident. Shawn Wasson hopes that this new website, SaveImus.com, will provide an online force to help prevent the firing of Don Imus.
