

The Ratings Guy Names Top 30 Food Websites

Food, fast food, spicy food, Mexican food, Chinese food and Italian food have never been easier using the new Top 30 Food Sites named today by TheRatingsGuy.com. Searching for food on the Internet is more popular than searching for: Yahoo, Travel, News, YouTube, Shopping, Health, Sports or Real Estate, as determined by DigitalPoint's Keyword Suggestions tools.

Portland, ME, June 08, 2007 --(PR.com)-- The Ratings Guy names new award-winning food websites which are found at www.TheRatingsGuy.com. Food lovers have a whole new resource for finding great websites and uncovering some of the best and most unique food suppliers, all with home delivery. The Ratings Guy hunted through thousands of website offerings and selected only the best that meet the grade for Quality, Trust and Experience.

The Great Site recognition helps consumers to find the great sites sooner

Some of the favorites include:

E4B.com - Fruit purées

JustTomatoes.com - Great veggie snacks

GreatPecans.com - Sumptuous pecan pie

Leonidas-Chocolate.com - Belgian Chocolate

PocoDolce.com - Chocolate topped with sea salt

ReluctantGourmet.com - Culinary Guide

...and 25 more great food sites found at www.TheRatingsGuy.com

The Ratings Guy has recognized websites in order to help consumers find the great sites sooner. Personal experience with the websites, and in most cases with their products and service levels help consumers find superior, safe and reliable businesses that meet or exceed high standards. A Yahoo search revealed over 940 million results for the food category making it more difficult than ever before to find great sources on the Web.

"Food is one of the most popular search terms showing a new hunger for information about the most basic of nourishment said John Morrow, co-founder of The Ratings Guy. "Fast food and spicy food lead the category, but the regional Mexican, Chinese and Italian foods top the variety chart and reveal overall preferences, added Morrow. "These Great Sites are all on the Web, and they would be invisible without us," he said. "Our Great Site recognition helps consumers to find the great sites sooner," he added.

The Ratings Guy was developed by a team, experienced in the consumer research and ratings field and frustrated with the search industry's inability to separate advertising from editorial. The company reviews and rates websites across an array of popular consumer lifestyle categories including: health, travel, house

& home, pets, gourmet food, kids, shopping, and more. The Ratings Guy is an independent and objective resource, supported by research librarians and researchers (the original search engines) who seek to identify the very best Web resources. The company uses a proprietary review methodology to test sites against its own benchmarks for transparency, accuracy, timeliness, functionality, trust, and usefulness. The Ratings Guy hosts the Great Site Benchmarking Network, an exclusive group of Internet thought-leaders working to advance consumer empowerment on the Web.
