

The New Homes Section Finds a New Home of Its Own, Online

NewHomesSection.com announced today that it will launch advertising for new home builders starting the beginning of July. The company will utilize its unique concept of placing newspaper like ads online and will offer free ad placement for the first few weeks. The goal of NewHomesSection.com is to decrease the cost of advertising for new home builders by creating an information outlet online for consumers that is similar to a newspaper's new homes section.

Phoenix, AZ, June 14, 2007 --(PR.com)-- The New Homes Section is not just for newspapers anymore. A new online startup featuring Arizona homebuilder ads will go "live" this weekend. The Queen Creek based company, NewHomesSection.com has created a website that displays home builder ads which offer homebuyers and Realtors® helpful information during their new home search. NewHomesSection.com features large color ads similar to those found in your local newspaper with information about builders, their homes, their communities, and often, their weekly offers. In addition to large ads, NewHomesSection.com displays a weekly article on a great Arizona community and showcases a weekly "featured home" meant to be a home that will simply not last on the market because of its incredible value and appeal. The website allows visitors to easily browse articles and ads in order to find the right home in the right location and at the right price. Ads will be online and will always be available. All ads lead to the builder's website so that a consumer or Realtor can browse the website and call to schedule an appointment with a sales associate.

NewHomesSection.com will feature ads beginning Friday 6/15/2007, and will continue to promote builder offers, homes, and communities on a weekly basis. Purchasing a home is not meant to be a rushed process but rather a memorable experience. Let NewHomesSection.com guide you in finding your perfect home.

NewHomesSection.Com is based in Queen Creek, AZ and was founded in 2007. The company wants to offer home buyers and Realtors® a truly unique experience.
