

Indonesian Web Developer Releases an AdSense Alternative Software

Jakarta, Indonesia, June 28, 2007 --(PR.com)-- Sabukhitam.com - an Indonesian Web Developer Company, release interesting web based software - AfterSense Script - that claims will be the next AdSense Alternative software.

By placing AdSense Contextual ads on their site or blog, site publishers and bloggers earn a little share of Google income. But Google only pays publisher when their site visitors click those tiny little ads.

Site publishers and bloggers are trying hard to collect nickels from Google AdSense. Unfortunately for many publisher with an average traffic, collecting even 100$ per month from Google AdSense is very hard.

Many publishers who hate to see their AdSense Earning at a very low speed, tend to click the ads by them self. And Google will ban those publishers.

Author of AfterSense Script claims that by switching to their software, site owner and blog publisher can cut Google completely out of the loop by doing just two things...

- 1) Sign up for affiliate programs that convert well and pay high commissions. And...
- 2) Use AfterSense Script to display tiny text ads on their site, instead of Google's AdSense.

Many blog publishers start using AfterSense, this because instead of collecting nickels from Google AdSense, they get between 50% - 70% commissions from affiliate program.

With the same traffic to their site or blog, AfterSense Script increase their earning potential.

By placing a little HTML snippet provided by AfterSense Script, any matching keywords or key phrase on their site or blogs will change into a clickable link with a pop up div.

AfterSense Script takes advantage of web 2.0 techniques to be non-intrusive and interactive at the same time.

Regarding technical specifications, AfterSense Script use PHP, MySQL and JavaScript. Not like many developers who encrypt their script, Sabukhitam.com release AfterSense Script un-encrypted.
