

Firefox Users Now Have Their Passwords at Their Fingertips with A&H Software's FingerAuth Password Manager

Do not waste your time anymore by trying to remember your web passwords each time you need them. With A&H Software's FingerAuth Password Manager, log in to sites with just the touch of your finger.

Sao Paulo, Brazil, August 08, 2007 --(PR.com)-- Have you ever been stuck in front of your computer wondering which password you used on a website? Do you have a Post-it note on your monitor with all of your Internet passwords because they're all too complicated to remember? These days are now over: with A&H Software's FingerAuth Password Manager you can enter your passwords on Mozilla Firefox with just the touch of your finger.

By using an ordinary fingerprint reader, you simply touch the reader with any finger and the software will enter the information for you instantly, instead of filling in all of the fields of a login page. The program runs on Windows 98 or newer and is freely available for a 30-day evaluation at <http://www.fingerauth.com/>.

"FingerAuth fills a gap in password-related extensions for Firefox: the simpler solutions are limited, and the complete solutions aren't convenient or easy to use," says Belarmino de Camargo, the product manager responsible for the program.

In order to log in with your fingerprints, you register them once with the program. When you touch the reader with a finger, FingerAuth Password Manager compares the scanned fingerprint with the ones already registered by you to verify your identity. Once it's confirmed, and only if so, your login information, such as your user name and password, is submitted to the website.

"After some hours checking my e-mails, accessing my Orkut and logging in to forums by just slapping my finger over the reader, I can't stand typing all those passwords anymore," says Moacir Soares, who participated in the beta- testing phase of the product.

FingerAuth Password Manager runs on Windows 98 or newer and is freely available for a 30-day evaluation at <http://www.fingerauth.com/>. At the website users can also instantly purchase a registration code for only US$30 to unlock all of the program features and receive priority technical support.

About A&H Software

A&H Software is a developer of high-quality, highly technological and highly specialized B2B software solutions with more than 15 years of experience. With its office in Sao Paulo, Brazil, and a technical staff from the largest universities in the Americas, like USP, UNESP and UNICAMP, the company explores the state-of-the-art in technology, investigating new tendencies in software and creating innovative solutions.

###

Contact Information:

A&H Software Ltda.

Wilton Roseiro

+55 11 3717-2036

Contact via Email

www.fingerauth.com

Online Version of Press Release:

You can read the online version of this press release at: <http://www.pr.com/press-release/47764>