

Joe Kaminski, Heart-Lung Transplant Patient, Has Released Second Novel

Mesa, AZ, August 16, 2007 --(PR.com)-- Joe Kaminski, Jr., a heart-lung transplant patient has published his second novel titled "In The Company of Legends," with Booklocker.com.

"In The Company of Legends" is a story about a professional baseball player, Russell Black, who discovers he can't hit a baseball for the life of him after an accident. The Big Guy (God) answers Russell's prayers and he receives help by the spirits of Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Ted Williams. From the first meeting with the spirits Russell learns the meaning of life: believing in himself and those who love him.

Joe Kaminski wrote his first book "Vision of the Field: A Baseball Fantasy," while recovering from a heart-lung transplant in 2003.

"I wrote the first book as a challenge to myself," noted Mr. Kaminski. "While writing that book, I discovered that I enjoyed the writing process and decided to continue writing. That resulted in this second book."

While noting that this book is also a book about baseball, there are differences. "That first book was, in part, based on my heart-lung transplant and long recovery. This second book is more a book based on my imagination and research and is more original in nature," says Mr. Kaminski.

Link to Publication*: <http://www.booklocker.com/books/3022.html>

About Author:

Joe Kaminski, Jr. is a graduate of Calumet College of St. Joseph, Hammond, Indiana and is an avid reader and writer. This is his first book published on Booklocker.com He continues to write, planning his next book for the Nanowrimo.com writing challenge held each November.

About Booklocker:

Booklocker was established in 1999 and presently supports more than 1,000 authors on their site. www.booklocker.com

###

Media Contact: Joe Kaminski, Jr., Peaclver@earthlink.net

Contact Information:

Joe Kaminski, Jr.
219-937-2496
peaclver@earthlink.net

Online Version of Press Release:

You can read the online version of this press release at: <http://www.pr.com/press-release/48876>