New York, NY, September 28, 2007 --(PR.com)-- Even famous restaurant owner, Roman Kaplan couldn't resist the allure of the smart and sexy World Wide Web, and has started his own blog in May. His restaurant, Russian Samovar has been a hot-spot for celebrities and influential figures for over 20 years and Kaplan, an established socialite, has been exposed to more gossip than a tabloid editor.

Roman writes about events and happenings in the Russian Samovar, and shares his own personal experiences. Celebrities and influential people are almost always involved in the story, so reading Roman's blog is a great way to find out some of the latest celebrity news.

Kaplan, is well-known for his fantastical story telling abilities. Many personal friends and patrons of his restaurant have fallen under his narrative spell, when he would gaze in fond remembrance to a place beyond the listener, to the distant or recent past and vividly describe what he sees there. 69 year old Kaplan is rich in life experience, but is also a modern man. His sentimental nature has inspired him to take advantage of what technology has to offer and publish his endearing tales on the web, in order to share his news and experience in far away friends and fans.

Roman Kaplan opened Russian Samovar in 1986, together with famous dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov and Nobel-Prize-winning poet, Joseph Brodsky. It wasn't long before Kaplan, a former East-side gallery owner and his celebrity partners attracted many of the most prominent figures of the art, entertainment, and intellectual world to their restaurant. Since it's early years, Samovar has been a known hangout for Russian, American and International celebrities.

Russian Samovar is located on 256 W 52nd Street in Midtown Manhattan and serves high-end Russian cuisine and infused vodka, which is made in-house. Dining is accompanied by live piano music every nights of the week. Roman's blog can be viewed at russiansamovar.blogspot.com or on the restaurant's website: www.russiansamovar.com
