Phoenix, AZ, October 04, 2007 --(PR.com)-- Matt and Kelly McEniry, a husband and wife team and owners of Wall Art Studios in Phoenix, strive to enrich people's work space through art and design while featuring local artists.

“Our passion is to contribute to the community in a way that is creative and uplifting,” Kelly states. “Helping people achieve a beautiful work environment is how we do it.”

Wall Art Studios works closely with architects and designers specializing in commercial and high end residential properties with projects in need of murals, framed art, custom mirrors, furniture, plants and accessories.

Matt is especially passionate about framing art. “It is amazing how the appearance of a painting or print can change based on how well the art is framed or hung,” he says. Framing a picture correctly and with the appropriate material is something Wall Art Studios takes pride in, as you can tell when you enter their studio at 2119 E. Indian School Road in Phoenix.

To determine what type of art should be showcased in a particular space, Kelly first meets with the client to determine their likes and dislikes, and also learn how they want to be perceived by those visiting their workspace, realizing that your first impression should be your best impression.

“It is always my goal to let their personalities shine through and develop a space that they will love and be excited about.”

Kelly is also quick to point out that “every job is different, as every person is unique. Equally important, the architectural details of the space are key in determining how to display art that best represents the clients' personalities.” As Wall Art's website (www.wall-artstudios.com) states, “not every interior can boast of amazing architecture, but they can all have outstanding details.”

The art itself is as important as the space. Wall Art Studios has the opportunity to feature talented local artists that have a passion for creative, unique pieces.

“There is such a great pool of talent here in the Valley. We feel privileged to be able to offer such a large variety of marketable imagery at reasonable prices, allowing it to be attainable for a wide range of clients,” states Kelly.

Wall Art Studios is always looking for new artists and enjoys featuring photography, paintings, prints and sculptures which are unique, colorful, textural, contemporary and most importantly corporate friendly.
