

Brazil's Natal May Host 2014 World Cup Matches: Beach Property Investment Ltda Prepare for an Influx of Property Investors.

The Brazilian world cup project worth $1.1Billion, is reported to include the construction of a stadium in the coastal city of Natal, in northeast Brazil. Along with the construction of the largest airport in South America (one of the largest in the world), this makes Natal one of the most attractive places in the world to invest. Beach Property Investment Ltd predict a rush from international property investors looking to cash in on world cup fever.

Natal, Brazil, November 05, 2007 --(PR.com)-- It has been confirmed that Brazil are to hold the 2014 world cup. There is no doubt that this event will raise the profile of the country, with significant economic benefits arising as a result. Former Brazilian international Antonio Lopes told Reuters: "I think this is going to help not only football but will help the country as a whole." Football legend Pele also commented "It's something fantastic, because everybody knows that Brazil is the incarnation of football".

Authorities in Brazil are now carrying out a wide variety of infrastructural developments in preparation for the event. The Brazilian project worth $1.1Billion, is reported to include the construction of four stadiums in the cities of Recife, Salvador, Maceio and Natal, all in northeast Brazil, besides restoring and expanding 14 existing stadiums. Russell Messenger from Beach Property investment commented on the impact of this for Brazil property investment saying "The world cup will be excellent for the Brazilian economy. However, the impact of a new stadium to hold games in Natal is an enormous boost for the city, in combination with the construction of the new airport (Due to be the largest in South America) now makes Natal one of the best places in the world to invest in property".
