

Ziphany, LLC Becomes Microsoft Energy Vertical

Ziphany, a private energy solution provider and consulting company, has officially registered its newest product, EOP, with Microsoft and is now a vertical for Microsoft to the energy industry.

Buffalo, NY, December 08, 2007 --(PR.com)-- Ziphany - a leading provider of software and data solutions for the energy industry - announced today that it is now an official Microsoft Certified partner and ISV (Independent Software Vendor).

Ziphany's latest product offering - ZEOP - for the energy industry is expected to launch next week as an official vertical of Microsoft. It provides comprehensive financial and administrative solutions for the energy industry, built on Microsoft's industry-standard Dynamics NAV.

Since partnering with Microsoft, Ziphany's President Brian Palka has announced plans to re-release this product, which was formerly known as Dart. Palka projects, "[Our] newest energy platform is uniquely tailored and is perhaps the industry's most comprehensive operations solution to date. With current customers awaiting the newest version, we're anticipating quick distribution and fast implementation."

To release next week, the new product will answer:

- The need for infinite scalability
- Constantly changing market and LDC rules, enabling faster/easier entrance into new markets
- A need for reliable forecasting tools, improving buying decisions
- A need for unparalleled security, ensuring the safety of critical data
- A lack of integration between warehouse documentation, billing systems, and accounting systems
- Inefficient and inaccurate data entry
- The difficulty in reconciling accounts receivable with general ledger accounts
