New York, NY, December 22, 2007 --(PR.com)-- The virtual recycling site has just been launched: Virtual dumpster vdumpsters.com by Vyouz Ltd

Following the amazing success and demand from the virtual recycling site Vskips in England - Vdumpsters has been launched in the US.

Covering every State and County, users can create their own virtual dumpster and put whatever they want into it to give away. This puts whole new meaning on dumpster diving as you can do it from the comfort of your own home, business or in fact any organisation.

The idea is to promote the reusing and recycling of people's unwanted items.

The main benefit environmentally is the reduction in land fill or stuff just being dumped when there is always someone who may want your "unwanted items;" as the old saying goes "one man's trash is another man's treasure".

Disposing of waste into landfill sites is detrimental to the natural environment around us. Conservation of natural resources is important for all future generations. It is estimated that over 400 million tons of waste was disposed into United States landfills in recent year and the situation is likely to be much worse. If this continues, we are likely to bury ourselves under a suffocating pile of landfill waste.

The fact of the matter is that much of it isn't really "trash" at all, but is good stuff that could be given a new home, reused or recycled. Computers, TVs, Antiques, Garden Tools, Wood, Toys, Bicycles, Musical Instruments - you name it, we dump it, and it all has an impact on the environment.

Your support of vDumpsters keeps stuff out of landfill, helping to protect your environment from further damage. Instead of using a real dumpster first, upload your unwanted items to a virtual dumpster (vDumpster) and then dive and claim other people's items for free.

Totally free to use, Virtual dumpster diving is set to become a national fun event, helping people to help each other and helping to protect their environment - what could be better.
