Portland, OR, January 09, 2008 --(PR.com)-- Multi-Media Productions (USA), Inc. announces that Jet Reports International, Inc. will be featured on 21st Century Business, hosted by General Alexander Haig on Fox Business Network, January 12 and 13, 2008 and on US Airways international flights throughout the month of May, 2008.

Business managers are in need of attaining greater visibility into their businesses. On this segment of 21st Century Business, Phillip Bride, President of Jet Reports International, discusses how his company is helping get a better handle on corporate data.

“Jet Reports finally gives our target customer base the perfect means to watch their business operations in detail throughout the day, week, month—whatever they need. They can make strategic and operational decisions with accuracy,” stated Phillip Bride, President Jet Reports International, Inc. “They can put accurate, up-to-date information in front of their operations managers, suppliers and even customers to continually improve their businesses. It's the first time they really have control over access to this information. Jet takes the mystery out of corporate and operations reporting.”

Vice President of Programming, JL Haber, added, “As the demand for innovative document management software grows, Jet Reports has positioned itself to meet this ever increasing demand. We are excited to have them as a guest on our program.”

Jet Reports is an analytical tool to link Excel to a database like Nav,” Says Michelle Lewis-Waddell, controller, R-D-Arc in Toronto Canada. “Managing our fleet is key for us. Recently we were looking information that wasn't readily available. With Jet Reports we were able to get exactly the information we need, instantly.”

Jet Reports frees the business manager from relying on reporting experts and puts reporting control back into the business manager's hands.
