

Learn English Four Times Faster - for Chinese, Spanish and Russian Speakers

Cross-translation is the main barrier in acquiring fluency in English. Most language books are written by linguists for potential linguists. It is very difficult for linguists to understand the difficulties non-linguists have in learning English. Follow the advice and use the patented software for self-study of English and you will do it four times faster.

Powell, OH, January 12, 2008 --(PR.com)-- Most language books are written by linguists for linguists. It is very difficult for linguists to understand the difficulties non-linguists have in learning a language. They cannot understand that what was easy for them to learn is extremely difficult for others. You know that most adult learners don't want to be linguists. So first create the right habits and discover how to learn English naturally. If you wish to achieve your goal of speaking fluently in English without becoming a linguist and be an active and successful netizen of the Global economy you need to reevaluate your beliefs and the advice of leading language companies and linguists. Their advice is given to potential linguists and is not applicable to you. Here is the proof:

90% of adults consider themselves as language-incapable because conventional methods based on memorization and grammar rarely give the desired results.

Cross-translation is the main barrier in acquiring a foreign language.

Conventional methods don't even mention this problem because they are not capable of providing a means of overcoming subconscious cross-translation.

Here is the list of what you should Not do:

- Make cross-translation into and from the native language.
- Memorize anything.
- Use boring grammar books.
- Study awful vocabulary lists.
- Use translation drills.
- Use flash cards.

Here is the list of what you Should do:

Instead of consecutive repetition use simultaneous repetition, to ensure turning off cross-translation and the formation of an English language speech center in the brain.

Simultaneous repetition has never before been used for learning a foreign language; it provides excellent results in the formation of a direct link between an image or situation and block of English words.

Listen and imitate rather than learn from theory. Spend the major portion of the time talking in the English language using the patented Language Bridge software (USA patent 6,341,958).

Language Bridge software (www.language-bridge.com) helps you to seamlessly incorporate multiple Internet resources into a modularized, computer-based learning environment.

It provides you with a learning environment incorporating electronic dictionary, testing program, and drills to 31 lessons and to new lessons of your choice, to give you the option of expanding your vocabulary of specialized vocational or technical terms.

The LanguageBridge software can be used from the comfort of one's home 24/7. Using this technique, every adult student becomes a language prodigy making the best use of his/her time.

Your goal of speaking in English fluently without thinking could be achieved in six months.

After you language speech center is formed in the brain you could further expand your vocational or technical skills using multiple free Internet online courses that are currently of little use to you since you have not yet overcome the language barrier. Soon you will start speaking in English on any topic in your daily life without realizing you're doing it automatically.
