

Lawline.com Offers New CLE Credit Hours That Never Expire

New York, NY, January 15, 2008 --(PR.com)-- Lawline.com is now offering packages of CLE credits for attorneys looking to earn their credits online. Lawline.com, an innovative provider of Continuing Legal Education online, is changing the way their users can purchase courses. Attorneys can now purchase a package of credit hours that never expire and apply the credit to any course they want.

Unlike purchasing individual courses that may only be active in certain states for 1-2 years, these credits never expire. This means that an attorney can buy a package of credits, use some right away and save some until their next reporting period. In essence, attorneys will be getting a discount on courses they will need in the future.

Lawline.com first announced this new system in a holiday newsletter sent to the company's current users. On January 1, 2008, the system was made available to everyone who signs up. The hope is that users will get more enjoyment out of the CLE experience since they can take the courses they want, when they want. The packages start as low as $275, and range from 12 to 45 credits. To take advantage of this new credit option visit CLE Credits Page.

Lawline.com has been providing online Continuing Legal Education since 1999, and now serves more than 35 states across the country. Lawline.com continues to look for new ways to assist attorneys nationwide complete their mandatory CLE requirements easily and efficiently.
