

Willow Wood Releases New Two Color Letterpress Collection for 2008 Wedding Season

Willow Wood already the leading letterpress company on the internet for embossed wedding stationery now focuses on reviving the art even further with designs in two color letterpress.

Bridgeport, United Kingdom, March 12, 2008 --(PR.com)-- After nearly three years in developing highly specialised artwork in three dimensional form for embossing, the company's managing director Joan Bruce has unveiled plans for a vast collection of colorful letterpressed designs.

But isn't this a U-turn for the company that has long boasted and still is the only company on the internet with a full range of embossed wedding stationery?

"Absolutely not," Mrs Bruce denied "we're simply expanding our ability to give customers a greater choice. We've always been primarily a letterpress design and print service. Now we can unveil our 2008 gallery which has six new collections of letterpress art the first of which is the 'Nature's Touch' collection and the first stationery set has been released this week giving a taste of what's to come."

The first design is a drawing of cherry blossom that's been printed as an engraving or line drawing and is very effective etched into the paper. The 'Blossom Confetti' stationery set appears on the official company blog and also on the Willow Wood website in a full letterpress showcase.
