

Let Cellhut Equip You with the Samsung F110 Adidas Phone

One of the internet's leading sellers of unlocked phones is stocking the Samsung F100 Adidas phone in order to better serve its customers.

New York, NY, May 13, 2008 --(PR.com)-- With the warm weather fast approaching its time to lace up those running shoes and spend some time getting the best form of exercise possible: running. There's nothing like shedding a few pounds and enjoying the great outdoors at the same time, or if you live in New York City racing around the slice of heaven that is Central Park. Either way, getting out of the stale gym to breath in fresh air is the perfect way to get some exercise.

Adidas is the brand of choice when it comes to purchasing apparel that incorporates technology designed for people on the move. Now with the F110, Adidas has combined their winning sports aesthetic with Samsung's superior technology for a phone that tracks movement and motivates at the same time.

True to the F110 software's name, miCoach, the on-board application measures your process using a built-in accelerometer and a step counter. Adidas has specifically designed this phone for runners who want to push their abilities to the limit. The miCoach software has various running goals that runners can set for themselves and will gradually increase the target distance for the number of times it has been run. This system enables the user to view the statistics of their previous run and compare it to the current one, this is a self-motivating method that is sure to keep runners ahead of the game.

Other fine features include 1 Gigabyte of onboard storage so that a whole collection of music can fit in the phone, and the included 3.5mm audio jack remote will allow the connection of a set of headphones.

The F110 Adidas Phone is the perfect companion for the seasoned athlete or somebody who wants to begin running to get in shape and needs a little of that Adidas magic to get going.
