

EclipseSpa Adds Plant Power to Bath and Beauty Products

EclipseSpa leverages the restorative powers of plants to enhance beauty and health.

Danville, CA, May 14, 2008 --(PR.com)-- Since the beginning of time, people on all continents have relied on indigenous plants to treat ailments and heal wounds. Rather than reinvent the wheel, EclipseSpa took a cue from ancient beauty and wisdom practices and included the same key organic ingredients that people have been using for centuries in EclipseSpa's bath and beauty products.

The intensity of the sun's rays coupled with environmental toxins interact with the skin causing damage to the body's largest organ. Protecting skin integrity involves creating products that are free from preservatives, dyes, perfumes and other chemical additives that are known to be toxic. EclipseSpa is committed to using organically grown ingredients to help people maintain healthy bodies, from the outside in.

Among EclipseSpa's ingredient deck, you will find organically grown Aloe Vera. The Egyptians revered this succulent. Cleopatra mashed up this plant of perpetual youth and rapid healing, spreading it on her notoriously beautiful face. Great for sunburns, Aloe Vera also provides a good source of silicon that skin needs to rejuvenate itself.

In ancient China, Gotu Kola was the principle ingredient in a famous elixir called "Fo Ti Tieng," a brew that had an astounding reputation as a "Fountain of Youth." Gotu Kola works specifically to stimulate the production of collagen and enhances the integrity of connective tissue. It hastens wound healing, improves elasticity and rejuvenates blood vessels.

Organic Geranium has been used for centuries in topical skin care applications. Proving to be excellent for rebuilding scarred, damaged, and broken down skin cells, geranium can renew even severely burned skin without leaving any discoloration or scarring behind.

Other EclipseSpa ingredients include horsetail, comfrey, dandelion, apricot kernel oil and pumpkin seed oil. All these ingredients are organic and all products are paraben free.
