New York, NY, May 21, 2008 --(PR.com)-- DM2 Events Presents The Digital Publishing & Advertising Conference on June 25 in New York

“Cracking The Code on Digital Publishing & Advertising” addresses the exploding digital content and advertising industry and what it means for agencies, brands and consumers

DM2 Events, a leading organizer of conferences and exhibitions for the digital content and advertising community, will host The Digital Publishing & Advertising Conference (DPAC) on June 25 at the Marriott Marquis, New York. DPAC will bring together key figures in media, marketing, publishing and technology to discuss the exploding digital content and advertising industry.

“There is no other event today that addresses the core issues and challenges all content providers face in a digital media landscape,” says Nick Friese, President of DM2 Events. “This event is geared to help publishers crack the code to their distribution, marketing and advertising strategies in a world where media has crossed the digital frontier.”

DPAC will help both big and small media and content companies, full-service agencies and brands get the most out of their integrated publishing and advertising strategies. Leading executives will discuss the innovative ideas in digital delivery technology, forecast the future of digital ad spending as well as reveal opportunities for traditional content companies and advertisers to respond to this growing market.

Unique breakout sessions and built-in workshops will provide attendees with the opportunity to roll up their sleeves and learn directly from best practices, case studies and proven tactics. These sessions will aim to show participants how to create dynamic digital content that engages readers and advertisers, develop powerful advertising within digital platforms, boost circulation and attract the right audience, measure digital magazine readership and ROI and leverage the power of the web, email, and mobile to build awareness for digital titles.

"We believe that publishing is entering a new era, where its digital facets will not only support the growth and strength of our favorite publications, but will lead them into the hearts of the next generation. We see this event as a critical to this era," said Jeannie Mullen, Global EVP & CMO, Zinio and VIV Magazine, a sponsor of the event.
