

Free Real-Estate Service Encourages Home Owners to Save Thousands When They List Their Home for Sale

Orlando, FL, May 24, 2008 --(PR.com)-- With real-estate uncertainties plunging, many homeowners are looking to sell their homes at fair prices without having to pay excessive fees, such as an agent commissions. Agents can be very expensive, and sometimes closing the deal means getting just as much as your agent does.

Homes-For-Sale-By-Owner.info is a free consumer-to-consumer website which allows sellers to list their homes and to reach thousands of eager buyers. This 100% free service allows sellers to list details of their properties including a description, photos, and contact information, which most other websites do not allow.

Perhaps the most important part of the website is that it saves buyers and sellers money. It will save home sellers thousands because it doesn't charge a 6% fee as most real estate brokers do, and depending upon the market, this can potentially save sellers up to $30,000. Buyers can also benefit because in a normal real estate transaction, the buyers' agent receives 3 to 4% of the 6% paid by the seller. With purchasing a home directly from the sellers however, there is no agent to take away from the savings, which means the buyer receives a better deal. This is a great savings for sellers who are squeezed with equity due to the mortgage crises, and for buyers who can't afford to pay extra fees.

Consistently growing, homes-for-sale-by-owner.info currently receives over 500,000 views per month. Normally for this type of service, it would cost thousands to list a house for sale. With this website however, nothing is paid, and it's made to be a seamless and easy process.

The staff of homes-for-sale-by-owner.info is eager to assist homes buyers and sellers; especially in this economic real estate market in which every penny counts.
