

Pat Boone Says “Yes” to Shame-free Sex Talk

It's not cool nowadays for parents and kids to talk about sex and the consequences of sexual activities. Pat Boone and The Little Talk Before The Big Talk are hoping to make it cool. A new parenting book that offers 80 easy conversation starters for fear-free sex education got a major endorsement from the legendary Pat Boone just in time for Father's Day.

Atlanta, GA, June 08, 2008 --(PR.com)-- Father's Day is just around the corner; and international media professional, Oscar LaVilla, received a major endorsement for his new parenting book, The Little Talk Before The Big Talk, A Parent's Guide to Shame-free Sex Talk, from one of America's biggest icons for family-friendly entertainment, Pat Boone.

“I do appreciate the book and its intent and hope my endorsement works...” writes Pat Boone in a letter to the author. The 300-page book delivers a break-through plan that works for parents regardless of their political, religious, philosophical, or cultural views about sex and morality. It is the ideal companion to all the other sex education books in the market place because it offers a new conversation model: The Emotionally Intelligent Plan. This may be the only book in the market place dedicated exclusively to eliminating fear and shame surrounding the big sex talk and offers 80 ways to start the conversation fear-free.

Pat Boone adds, “I was a young dad of 23 when I graduated from college with four little girls already! Maybe I should have had a little sex education myself -- but it has been a delightful and rewarding ride. Now wife Shirley and I have 15 grandkids, ten of them girls as well. We had to learn, through trial and error, how to communicate vital information like that included in this book to our own kids and grandkids. Most parents need this kind of help, and it sure is good to have it with a generous helping of humor as well. Bravo, Oscar!”

Pat Boone, descendant of the legendary pioneer Daniel Boone, has been a top-selling recording artist, the star of his own hit TV series, a movie star, a Broadway headliner, and a best-selling author in a career that has spanned half a century. During the classic rock & roll era of the 1950s, he sold more records than any artist except Elvis Presley.

Oscar LaVilla is co-host of the international cable television show, ON AIR, on the Global Christian Network. He is also a 10-year veteran home school father of four children. His motivation for writing the book is his view that a changing world demands changing home-based sex education from a Big Scary Sex Talk into peaceful Little Talks between parents and their kids.

Distributed by Ingram and Baker & Taylor, the paperback and hardback versions are available worldwide on book retailer websites such as Amazon, Barnes & Noble, and Books-a-Million for a suggested retail price of $19.95 and $27.95 respectively.
