

FX Hedge Funds Emerge with Cable Forex Funds

The FX market is a growing asset class for global investors. TriGlobal FX, professional money managers, have launched an FX Hedge Fund called Cable Forex Funds.

New York, NY, July 01, 2008 --(PR.com)-- FX Hedge Funds emerge.

Recent news from Reuters shows that there is a booming interest in foreign exchange markets.[i] According to the article, FX traders are seeing an increasing demand from institutional players, pension funds, and corporations. However, searching the internet will reveal few true FX hedge funds.

Tri Global FX, a New York based FX management company, has been managing FX accounts on behalf of customers for several years[ii]. The firm's head trader, Gregory Cotter, was a Chief trader at Societe Generale from 1998 - 2004, and has held similar positions at institutions such as Swiss Volksbank, Banque Indo-Suez, Credit Suisse, First Chicago, and European American Bank.[iii]

Recently, Futures Magazine has ranked Mr. Cotter a top trader in 2007.[iv] Their managed accounts program, Metro Forex, has been top ranked by Currency Trader magazine[v] and by the Barclay Institutional Report.

Tri Global FX is pleased to announce the launching of a new FOREX hedge fund, Cable Forex Funds[vi]. More details about the fund can be obtained by registering at their website, <http://cableforexfunds.com/>.

There are few true FOREX hedge funds, Cable Forex Funds aims to be a leading fund in the FX market. With an uncertain economy, volatile markets, and a declining dollar, any portfolio should include FX. Even if the US Dollar recovers, it can still have a negative impact on a portfolio as traders have been investing overseas during recent EURO boom. FX is an asset class by itself, in addition to providing additional alpha to any portfolio.
