

Going to College and Playing Baseball Just Got Easier

High School Baseball Players Now Have the Resources.

Naples, FL, July 09, 2008 --(PR.com)-- Baseball Edge, LLC today announced that they are putting an end to the grueling task that high school baseball student-athletes, and their parents, face when continued education and an opportunity to play college-level baseball are envisioned.

Baseball Edge introduces their website that provides all of the resources and guidance needed in one place. A Process 9-12 addresses the important steps to take for each high school grade level, not to mention, topics like financial aid, scholarships, academic and eligibility requirements for NCAA, NJCAA and NAIA, recruiting guidelines, the Clearinghouse, and so much more.

In addition, many college coaches and showcase organizations have joined forces with Baseball Edge to ensure that their student-athletes have access to their camp, clinic and showcase events happening across the country (an absolutely free resource for these organizations). Student-athletes attending such events is key in exposing their talent levels to coaches and scouts who are constantly on the lookout.

Every student-athlete is unique, with many issues to be considered when college choices are ready to be made (i.e., skill level, grades, finances, etc). The fact is, this process Requires parent participation and taking a pro-active stance will increase opportunities. Searching the numerous websites for information, wondering what to look for, or where to start, has come to an end.

Baseball Edge caters to the needs of our high school baseball student-athletes, working so hard to reach their goals. Unlike baseball, being educated with the tools necessary does not have a season. Baseball Edge has built their membership plans to be extremely affordable for everyone, with discounts for those who may need the service for longer periods of time. An extremely small price to pay when dreams and futures are at stake.

The true meaning of Team has again evolved, working together to ensure that each and every high school baseball student-athlete has an equal chance at the opportunities available to them. Experience the difference as you embrace this exciting journey, join Baseball Edge, today. There are opportunities for everyone. Visit www.baseballedge.org and get the edge!
