

Highly Profitable Eco-Forestry Out-Performs More Traditional Investments, Returning 30% Last Year

Bournemouth, United Kingdom, July 14, 2008 --(PR.com)-- Oxygen Investments offer eco-friendly investments in Teak and Agarwood which are proving to be lucrative investment vehicles for the individual investors they service.

Established 5 years ago, Oxygen has an impressive client retention rate, with 24% of clients re-investing. And that client base is growing fast as investors learn of this innovative approach to forestry-based investment, previously the privilege of large funds and those with specialist knowledge and contacts.

Thanks to Oxygen Investments, individual investors can now have a slice of the pie, provided they have the required funds (investments from £10k). Then sit back and wait, as the trees are planted and managed by an appointed forestry management company on your behalf.

Last year, tropical hardwoods returned 30%, outperforming more traditional forms of investment. Oxygen's calculations based on conservative figures expects an investment of £10,000 to provide a net return of £47,880 within 6 years. This low-level entry point opens the market significantly, but investments of much higher figures can be easily accommodated and managed.

Teak

They grow teak at Oxygen plantations using the latest scientifically proven cultivation methods including growing from tissue culture as opposed to seed. This process significantly shortens the growing cycle from 25 to 16 years and consequently provides quicker returns.

Agarwood

Owning trees has traditionally been a great investment that has consistently outstripped all other commodities for the past century. The only downside to owning trees has been the 16/18 years that we must wait before they can be harvested. Unlike teak, agarwood has the advantage of being ready to harvest after only 6 years, which means they can get 3 harvests of agarwood to one harvest of teak.

SIPP (Self-Invested Pension Plan)

If you would like to invest with Oxygen as part of a SIPP then there is financial advice on hand to explain this and assist in the process of setting this up for you. If you are unsure about this then they recommend that you contact your financial adviser for advice.

Should you require access to your invested funds, there is a good chance you will be able to sell on your investment, as it will be nearer maturity than new investments, and therefore more desirable to prospective investors.
