

Camp Millionaire to be Featured on Fox & Friends Sunday, July 27th

Santa Barbara, CA, July 25, 2008 --(PR.com)-- Fox & Friends has invited Andrew Adams, student entrepreneur and the youngest member of the Creative Wealth Intl. (CWI) Board of Directors, to appear Live this Sunday, July 27, 2008. Fox & Friends airs from 7-10 a.m. EST (4-7 am PST). Creative Wealth is the home of Camp Millionaire, a unique financial intelligence program for kids, teens and adults.

Andrew, who has attended three Camp Millionaire programs, starting at 10 years old in 2002, was also recently interviewed and mentioned in a Wall Street Journal article and serves on the Board of Creative Wealth Int'l. CWI teaches people of all ages about money and finance by offering training seminars and camps, including Camp Millionaire, Moving Out!, Wealth Rules!, Creative Wealth for Women and more.

Andrew was one of Creative Wealth's first students to sign up for their original Money Camp for Kids program. The program teaches kids how to think differently about money and how to create wealth in their lives by investing in assets that produce passive income. It also shows kids how to create jobs (not how to get jobs) and how to think like a wealthy person. Kids explore the extraordinary things that wealthy people do in the world and how they can grow up and do a lot of good for others once they are financially free themselves. The program changed names in 2008 to better represent the concept of teaching people to be creative and responsible for themselves and to better appeal to their market.

A financial education shouldn't be relegated to 'elective' status. It should be taught right along with math, science, reading and health. For more information, visit <http://www.creativewealthintl.org> or call 805-957-1024.
