

July “Kirkus Discoveries” Newsletter Features Six iUniverse Titles

iUniverse, the leading book marketing, editorial services, and supported self-publishing company, had six titles recognized among the “Kirkus Discoveries” best reviews for July.

Bloomington, IN, August 07, 2008 --(PR.com)-- iUniverse the leading book marketing, editorial services, and supported self-publishing company, had six titles recognized among the “Kirkus Discoveries” best reviews for July. The titles featured include:

- Law of Attractions Handbook, by Aiman A. Al-Maimani
Al-Maimani helps everyday people achieve their ultimate goals quickly by teaching them to focus their negative thoughts into self-assuring, motivational mantras.
- A Black Tie Affair, by Elizabeth Elwood
Opera singer Phillipa Beary, joined by her brother and father, work together to solve mysteries that revolve around ambition, love, and money.
- Unafraid, by Jeff Golden
Golden explores the possibility of living in a very different world if the bullet that killed President John F. Kennedy had strayed to the side, leaving him unharmed.
- Skunk Stew, by Helen Parramore
Sissy, a young girl living through the Depression, strives to regain memories of her father's suicide and the part she played in causing it.
- Marlowe's Ghost, by Daryl Pinksen
Pinksen suggests that Christopher Marlowe, a playwright and charged heretic, may have actually been the genius behind William Shakespeare's plays.
- Gandhi's American Ally, by Norm Williams
Williams documents the lives of his parents, American missionaries, who worked closely with Mahatma Gandhi to make drastic changes in India.

The “Kirkus Discoveries” monthly e-newsletter is sent to a targeted base of subscribers, including agents, editors, librarians, and individuals looking to acquire the print and film rights to books and unpublished manuscripts. Books reviewed by “Kirkus Discoveries” can be traditionally published, self-published, published via print-on-demand technology, or not previously published at all.
