"Listen to the whip-poor-will || The calling of the dove, || Where we spent many an evening || telling of our true love.

"I want to go back to the Ozarks || Watch that old river flow. || Where we fell in love together || oh so very long ago.

"I want to walk through the meadow || When the grass is wet with dew. || Where we walked along together || as sweethearts always do.

"Those days have gone forever || Now it's just a memory. || All the promises you made || 'neath the blooming dogwood tree."
