Recent release “My Life: Of Faith in God and Divine Interventions” from Page Publishing author Dr. Anthony Ikechukwu Akubue is a poignant autobiographical account that documents the author’s journey through life and how, through the incredible grace of God, he has been divinely influenced down a path of successes and triumphs.

Saint Cloud, MN February 09, 2024 --(PR.com)-- Dr. Anthony Ikechukwu Akubue, a professor of environmental and technological studies, has completed his new book, “My Life: Of Faith in God and Divine Interventions”: a compelling memoir that details how the author’s life has been influenced by his faith and relationship with the Lord, constantly being pushed in the right in order to achieve successful and fulfill his destiny in the world.

Over the course of his career, Dr. Anthony Ikechukwu Akubue has written with passion on multiple interdisciplinary issues for local, national, and international articles. Some of these topics have included speaking truth to power, human-centered economics, matters of faith, north-south technology transfer, environmental degradation, environmental stewardship and sustainability, human diversity and the imperative of peaceful coexistence, and gender-related issues. He is also a critic of north-south technology transfer. A textbook he authored, “Technological and Socioeconomic Development: A Third World Challenge,” is a required text for the course Technology and Third World Development at St. Cloud State University. Dr. Akubue has written chapters in books and won an award for the best article on gender disparity in the “Journal of Technology Studies,” volume XXVII, 2001.

Dr. Akubue shares, “It was imperative for me to write this narrative about God’s handiwork in my life, His purpose for putting me here on earth, and the fact that He watches over me, protects me, guides me, honors me by using me as one of His instruments through whom He delivers benevolence, compassion, support, and His loving care for the voiceless, the poor, downtrodden, and the afflicted.

“I am not a self-made man. Far from it. It would be selfish of me to keep God’s favors to me to myself without giving testimony to His existence, compassion, redemption, generosity, and infinite love for all His creation. This book is not about portraying myself to be better than anyone but to confess my vulnerability and struggle to be the light. What I am today is God’s handiwork that I cannot afford to keep a secret.”
