Bryceville, FL June 11, 2025 --(PR.com)-- Joe Newton has completed his new book, "How To Not Suck At Life: THOUGHTS ABOUT POSTMODERNISM, LIFE, EVIL, THE VIRTUES, AND LIVING BETTER WITH OUR FELLOW MAN": a compelling and eye-opening discussion exploring the ways in which restoring virtues to postmodern society can help to heal the damage and conflict of the current era to return to peace and understanding between individuals.

Author Joe Newton holds a BA in Biblical Studies from Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary and College and has pastored local churches since 1997. His pastoral focus is on human behavior and interpersonal relationships. The author is married to his wife, Lori, and has five children and seven grandchildren to date. He currently resides in his hometown of Jacksonville, Florida.

"We live in a time of conflict," writes Newton. "People have very little patience for one another, and the values of the past have been replaced with the destructive action of the present. How does such a society survive? This book surveys the solution. Virtues have always been the relational glue that holds societies together. When we give ourselves over to our lesser attributes, then chaos soon follows. This is the nature of evil. It distorts our original design as social and productive creatures. 'How To Not Suck at Life' is all about restoring virtues to our postmodern society. Change can often be beneficial to societies, but there are some ideals that must never fade away. The virtues are one of these ideals."

Published by Covenant Books of Murrells Inlet, South Carolina, Joe Newton's new book will resonate with readers of all faiths and backgrounds, providing a path towards societal healing from the ongoing conflict for those willing to live in peace with one another.
