Florence, OR November 26, 2025 --(PR.com)-- E.S. Fisher, a graduate of Southern Wesleyan University and the University of Oregon who currently resides in Oregon with her husband and four cats, has completed her new book, "My Mother's Child": a powerful memoir that follows the author as she reflects upon her life's challenges and struggles, highlighting her strength and conviction she showed with each new trial.

In "My Mother's Child," author E.S. Fisher shares both her personal triumphs and tribulations. From turbulence with her brother to the love of cousins and grandparents, the reader shares in her interesting journey. As a teenage girl who marries and becomes a mother during high school, Fisher's account shows how strength, endurance, and faith helped her survive many obstacles.

"The simple reason I have written my stories is for my children, grand-children, great-grandchildren, and future relatives who may want to know me," shares Fisher. "Youth is a wonderful gift that has one flaw; we think we will live forever, and we pay little attention to the people we love while they are alive."

The author continues, "At the forefront of my life, even when I was too young to realize the existence, God has been with me. I have been His child first. I have been led out of darkness by Him. His heavenly spirit has loved me. My faith has kept me here and helped me as I said goodbye to so many I love. It is with His grace that I know I will see them all someday. I want my children to love God, to know God as I have known Him. As I have always said, and I believe it in my heart, 'When you need God the most you will know Him'."
