Mechanicsburg, PA March 05, 2026 --(PR.com)-- Pam Lord has completed her new book, "Furry Tales: No One Saw It Coming," an engaging and uplifting children's story that joins a group of friends on an unforgettable adventure as they take chances to help and protect one another, which gets them into and out of trouble.

Author Pam Lord writes, "The disappearing sun brought cooler air down from the higher foothills of the mountain. As cool evening air settled over the area, Attila, an injured gray wolf, had just been told by what he considered his closest band of friends—a group of squirrels and a family of foxes—that the village council meeting had resulted in a yes vote for his membership in the village."

She continues, "The idea of village life was new to Attila. Where he came from, the pack was your home, strength, and refuge. There was no need to consider others, let alone get along with other groups. How was he going to fit in to this new order? The question of how or where to fit in involved awareness of all the different folks who made up the village. He asked himself, 'Can I fit in?'"

Published by Page Publishing, Pam Lord's memorable tale presents an opportunity to discuss character growth.
